

Melissa Menkel McGuire has over 23 years of experience representing small, medium and large public and private employers, non-profit organizations, associations and executives and professionals in all aspects of employment law. Prior to forming the Law Office of Melissa Menkel McGuire LLC, Ms. McGuire was a partner with a large, regional law firm for several years. She formed her own firm to provide more individualized service to her clients. She believes that each client deserves large firm skill and quality, but with the value and attention that a smaller firm offers.

Ms. McGuire practices before federal and state courts throughout Maryland and the District of Columbia, representing businesses in all aspects of employment law, such as defending wage and hour, wage payment and collection law, discrimination, breach of contract claims and employment tort claims such as wrongful discharge, negligent hiring and retention and defamation. She aggressively defends employers before federal, state and local administrative agencies on charges of discrimination, harassment, wage and hour law violations and unemployment compensation claims and appeals.

Ms. McGuire also regularly provides employers advice and counsel on all aspects of the employment relationship, including disciplinary matters, leave, benefits, policies and procedures, wage and hour compliance, protection of confidential, proprietary and trade secret information, employment contracts, severance, unemployment benefit issues, hire letters, discrimination and retaliation, independent contractor classification and employee medical issues. In addition, she provides advice and counsel to executives and professionals on employment contracts, compensation, restrictive covenants and severance agreements.

Ms. McGuire has published articles and regularly speaks on employment law topics. She has presented before the Maryland State Bar Association Annual Conference, the Bar Association of Baltimore City and the Chesapeake Society for Human Resources Managers.
